Unit 7, St. Book

1. Write a composition about the benefits of reading in our life.

Books are silent companions that guide us through life's journey. Reading opens doors to wisdom, offering lessons from the past and visions of the future. It calms the mind, inspires creativity, and deepens our understanding of ourselves and others. Through stories and facts, we travel beyond time and place, gaining insight and empathy. In a busy world, reading is a quiet refuge that shapes our thoughts, enriches our hearts, and keeps our curiosity alive.

Unit 7, Workbook

2. Write about a story that actually happened to you or use your imagination to make up a story.

Last year, I failed my first driving test and felt deeply discouraged. The disappointment pushed me to practice harder, focusing on my weak points. I studied the rules more carefully, took extra lessons, and stayed patient with myself. On my second attempt, I passed with confidence. That moment taught me that failure isn't the end—it's a step toward success if you keep trying. The victory felt even sweeter because I had earned it through persistence.

(Unit 8, St. Book)

3. Write a composition about money and friendship, giving your opinion which one is more important for happiness.

Money can buy comfort and security, but friendship brings warmth, trust, and emotional support that money cannot replace. True happiness often comes from shared moments, laughter, and knowing someone cares. While money meets our needs, friendship meets our hearts. In the long run, friendship is more important for lasting happiness, because love and connection give life its real meaning. In my opinion, shared experiences and mutual care create lasting fulfillment that money cannot achieve.

4. Write about a legend you have read.

The Epic of Gilgamesh is one of the world's oldest stories, telling of Gilgamesh, the powerful king of Uruk, and his companion Enkidu. Together, they face mighty challenges, defeat monsters, and seek glory. After Enkidu's death, Gilgamesh embarks on a quest for immortality, confronting the limits of human life. Ultimately, he learns that true legacy lies not in eternal life, but in the lasting impact of one's deeds and the city he built. (73 words)

(Unit 9, St. Book)

5. Write a composition about what it takes to be a good citizen in your community.
Your article should include rights and duties of a citizen in your community.

A good citizen respects laws, helps others, and cares for the environment. They participate in community activities, support those in need, and promote kindness. Honesty, responsibility, and respect for diversity strengthen trust among neighbors. By staying informed, voting, and working for positive change, a citizen contributes to a safer, happier community. True citizenship means putting the common good above personal gain and inspiring others to do the same. (68 words)

(Unit 9, Workbook)

6. Write about " The importance of law in people's lives".

Law is essential for maintaining order, protecting rights, and ensuring justice in society. It sets clear rules that guide behavior, resolve conflicts, and safeguard individuals from harm. By defining responsibilities and consequences, law promotes fairness and equality. It also provides stability, allowing people to live, work, and interact with confidence. Without law, chaos and insecurity would prevail, making it impossible for communities to thrive and for individuals to enjoy safety and freedom. (72 words)

(Unit 10, Workbook)

7. Write a composition to help people be culturally aware of your country.

Syria is a land of deep history, lively traditions, and warm hospitality. Its culture blends Arab, Kurdish, Armenian, and other influences, reflected in music, cooking, and crafts. Family bonds are strong, and guests are treated with great respect. Ancient cities like Damascus and Aleppo show rich architecture and heritage. Understanding Syrian culture means valuing community, honoring traditions, and appreciating resilience. By embracing these aspects, we promote respect and meaningful connections across cultures. (Unit 11, St. Book)

8. Write a summary of the Epic of Gilgamesh.

The Epic of Gilgamesh is one of the world's oldest literary works, telling the story of Gilgamesh, the powerful king of Uruk. His friendship with the wild man Enkidu transforms him, but Enkidu's death drives Gilgamesh on a quest for immortality. Along the way, he faces trials, meets Utnapishtim—the flood survivor—and learns that human life is finite. Ultimately, he returns to Uruk wiser, understanding that legacy and compassion are the true paths to enduring greatness. (77 words)

(Unit 11, Workbook)

9. Write a composition about any literary book you have read.

I recently read The Alchemist by Paulo Coelho, a story about Santiago, a shepherd chasing his dreams. The book beautifully blends adventure, philosophy, and self-discovery. Its message—that the universe helps those who follow their true purpose—deeply inspired me. I loved how every challenge Santiago faced became a lesson about courage and faith. This book reminded me that dreams are worth pursuing, no matter the obstacles, and left me feeling hopeful and motivated. (74 words)

(Unit 12, St. Book)

10. Write a composition of the role of art in the development of our world.

Art is humanity's mirror and compass. It tells our stories, celebrates our triumphs, and mourns our losses. Through paintings, music, literature, and design, art sparks imagination and challenges perspectives. It inspires revolutions, heals wounds, and connects generations. Without art, progress would lack soul; with it, our world grows richer in meaning and vision. Art does not just accompany development—it shapes the very path we walk toward a more enlightened and compassionate future. (73 words)

(Unit 12, Workbook)

11. Write a composition about a story you have read or been told.

I once heard a story about a village suffering from drought. An old wanderer told the villagers of a hidden well deep in the forest, guarded by silence. Many searched, but only a kind young girl found it—because she listened to the forest's whispers. She shared the water freely, and the village flourished again. The story taught me that kindness and patience often reveal treasures that strength alone cannot find. (71 words)
